

7th International Conference on Localized Agri-food Systems

Challenges for the new rurality in a changing world

Stockholm, 8-10 May 2016

Call for papers

The European Research Group SYAL, the Nordic Association of Agricultural Scientists (NJF) and Södertörn University welcomes you to propose papers for the 7th biannual world conference on localized agri-food systems. The conference will be organized by Södertörn University and held in Stockholm the 8-10 of May 2016.

Rationale

During the last decades, Localized agri-food systems (SYAL) have become increasingly important as tools for farmers, rural firms and consumers to meet market challenges and satisfy the rising demand for “food with a farmers face”. The potential contribution of localized agri-food systems to rural development by promoting economic development, social cohesion and counter-acting the demographic impact of agricultural modernization has also increased their political relevance. Previous research has addressed various aspects of the relationship between SYAL and geographical indications, as well as territorial, organizational and cultural issues, but there are still many unanswered questions and theoretical gaps to fill.

We welcome all topics related to localized agri-food systems, Alternative Agro-food Networks, short food chains and the new rurality.
